Dear Principals and Directors of Religious Education Programs:

As each of you share in my work of 'making Jesus Christ known and loved by all,' I am pleased to announce the Catholic Education and Formation Ministries (CEFM) Division has completed work on Religion Standards for Grades K – 8. The task of sharing our precious Catholic faith with our children is an incredible privilege and serious responsibility and these standards will assist you in that task. The standards are based on the Six Tasks of Catechesis contained in the General Directory of Catechesis (#85 & 86).

According to our current statistics there are approximately 65,000 children registered in K-8 Catholic schools and parish faith formation programs with a potential for more according to parish Baptismal records. We know that many of their parents and guardians have had a limited exposure to the full range of the truths of faith. Many steps have been taken to address this issue, so their children can grow in the knowledge of the Catholic faith and develop into adults with mature faith lives. The implementation of K-8 Religion Standards is another step we can take in assisting families with children in their faith development.

As we move forward as an Archdiocese in this privilege of sharing our faith and passing it on to the next generation, I am with you in spirit and in prayer.

With every good wish, I remain

Sincerely yours in Christ,

August 2005

Dear Principals and Directors of Religious Education K-8 Programs,

I am excited to share in the special mission we have all been called to do, 'making Jesus Christ known and loved' as our Division, CEFM, (Catholic Education and Formation Ministries) assist you in implementing the K-8 Archdiocesan Religion Standards in Faith Formation programs and in Catholic schools.

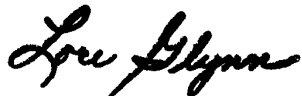

In my role as the Director of Education for the CEFM, and formerly as Associate Superintendent of Schools, it was becoming evident from many parent and pastor phone calls, and from you, a framework for a comprehensive faith formation program was needed. We now have this framework outlined in the K-8 Religion Standards based on the Six Tasks of Catechesis and grounded in the Catechism of the Catholic Church.

Using these Standards as a framework for your religion programs will help you:

- Assure that all children have a basic foundation of faith formation regardless of what parish/school program they attend
- Assure parents there is consistency in their child's faith formation even if they move to another parish
- Provide an instructional planning guide
- Design effective professional development
- Choose any approved religion curriculum and appropriate resources that best serves your community while meeting the expectations set within the Standards

The CEFM staff is able to assist you as resources in implementing these Archdiocesan Religion Standards. Please feel free to contact any one of them to help you or to answer any of your questions.

I ask God to bless you in this very important work.

an Introduction to the Religion Standards

The Standards and Benchmarks in Context:

The mission of the Catholic Church is to evangelize the world. In the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis we describe this mission as:

‘Making Jesus Christ known and loved in our time by choosing to live out the Gospel in every moment’

Such a mission requires ongoing personal and community awakening, transformation, and witness of persons and communities for the people of God to be effective in responding to this call. In other words, each man, woman and child needs ongoing formation and support to freely make this choice to grow in the skills, knowledge and practices needed to faithfully and fruitfully live out the Gospel in the joys and sorrows of each day. The aim of such ongoing formation and support, called “catechesis,” is to encourage a living, explicit, and fruitful profession of faith. (GDC #66)

Parents are the primary religious educators of their children through their lives and practices as family. Parents cannot hand on the Roman Catholic religion alone; however, the community also has essential roles in handing on the faith. Whether you identify it by CCD, religious education, faith formation, catechism class or some other name, the teaching authority of the Church, called the “magisterium,” expects the nature, mission and principles of catechesis to be the same from place to place in order for the faith to be lived and handed on in its totality.

The religion standards and benchmarks thus serve as guidelines for equipping the people and parishes for making Jesus Christ known and loved and for proclaiming the Gospel in this time and place. These standards draw together the magisterial teachings and directives related to catechesis, including the Catechism of the Catholic Church, General Directory for Catechesis, Our Hearts Are Burning Within Us, and the National Directory for Catechesis and best practices of teaching and the human sciences. In particular, the standards are based on the six fundamental tasks of catechesis (knowledge of the faith, liturgical formation, moral education, teaching to pray, community life and missionary initiation, GDC # 85-86). The benchmarks correspond to the knowledge, skills and practices appropriate to the various developmental phases in relation to that desired in a mature adult Catholic. The standards and benchmarks, in conjunction with the other guidelines and resources offered through Catholic Education and Formation Ministries, provide a consistent framework for religious education and faith formation processes at the parishes and Catholic schools in the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

How the Standards Came to Be:

During the 2004–05 academic year, a committee of parish directors of religious education, Catholic school principals and CEFM staff met to develop the standards. Various resources informed their work. Foundational church documents (see above) provided an initial framework that corresponded to the realities of parish/school life. Archbishop Flynn’s pastorals on Evangelization and Racism were incorporated. Comparisons were made to the religion standards developed by other dioceses from around the country, most notably the Archdioceses of Milwaukee, Baltimore, St. Louis, and the Dioceses of Madison, Green Bay, St. Cloud, and Fargo that generously shared their standards. The ‘Protocol for Assessing the Conformity of Catechetical Materials With the Catechism of the Catholic Church’ which is used to evaluate catechetical texts for the conformity with the CCC was also referenced. Finally, the scope and sequences of various religion publishers were reviewed. Other Archdiocesan offices, especially the Worship Center, consulted on the standards as well.

How the Standards are Written:

The basic framework for the religion standards consists of the six tasks of catechesis: knowledge of the faith, liturgical education, moral formation, teaching to pray, education for community life, and missionary initiation. Under each of the six tasks are subtitles which describe several standards within that task. Benchmarks in learning are then listed under each standard. Given the complexity and size of our parishes and schools and the need for flexibility in faith development, the benchmarks are divided into three age groupings by grade levels: K – 2, 3 – 5 and 6 – 8. High school benchmarks have not yet been established, because the United States bishops are currently working on outcomes for materials used with the Catholic high schools with plans to address parish high school resources next. Note that the ‘end in view’ of the standards is an adult faith, not that all Catholic faith is taught to a child before the end of eighth grade.

The benchmarks offer generalized outcomes with sparse evaluative detail. Each parish/school has the freedom to make the benchmarks resonate with the local culture and custom. For example, one benchmark asks children to name a number of ‘holy men and women’ who lived after the time of Jesus. Rather than being designated by the committee, each local parish/school is to specify a recommended list of names that relate to local culture, including the patron saint of the parish/school. Another benchmark asks children to ‘demonstrate reverence while in church.’ Each faith community is to designate how it will evaluate what reverence looks like based on local custom, be that genuflecting, bowing, no running/shouting, etc. Again, each parish/school will be able to add or adapt according to their situation.

How to Use the Standards:

The standards and benchmarks offer expectations for what is to be taught in the parish/school religious education programs. Leaders can utilize these standards and benchmarks as a guide in developing their religious education programs. Leaders and teachers can ensure that comprehensive, systematic formation is being addressed by utilizing the standards in mapping both their curriculum and what is taught at different grade levels. Parents, catechists and teachers can also use the standards and benchmarks to determine appropriate expectations for children at different phases of faith development.

Children need to experience caring communities, vibrant liturgies, and faith lived by people of all ages. The standards and benchmarks also make it clear that it takes the whole community living out its mission to teach and support children. The staff of the CEFM, the priests and catechetical leaders in the parishes and Catholic schools of the Archdiocese work together to assist parents in sharing the faith with their children. The ultimate goal is “to make Jesus Christ known and loved in our time.” These standards are an attempt to lead us toward accomplishing this goal.
